

ABSTRACT

5 A method and apparatus for efficiently removing a dissimilar material as part of a recycling process, which are free of problems in the terms of worker safety and the work environment, are provided. With the apparatus of the present invention, a working unit is operated to move a blade unit while pressing a plastic product from the outside thereof to punch out the dissimilar material.